

Transitory Messaging With Location InformationABSTRACT

Instant messaging clients provide location information in conjunction with registering their presence with an instant messaging server. The location information may be propagated to other instant messaging clients as well as to other commercial services, such as advertisers, and non-commercial services, so that actions can be taken with respect to locations of the instant messaging clients.